Introduction

- 1.1 The Arden MAT recognises that by efficiently managing its records, it will be able to comply with its legal and regulatory obligations and to contribute to the effective overall management of the institution. ## HR

Retention of all records relating to HR should take into account the recommendations of the Independent Inquiry into Child Sexual Abuse (IICSA). The report from the Inquiry recommended that records associated with child sexual abuse (CSA) should be preserved for 75 years. The Inquiry emphasised the need for this extended retention period due to the significant value these records hold for victims, and advised that they should be subject to regular reviews throughout this duration.

In instances where there is evidence or allegations of CSA, schools and academies may decide to retain the complete record, whether of a pupil, staff member, or other related documents - not merely the segments directly related to the abuse.

The Inquiry report advised that the UK government instructs the Information Commissioner's Office (ICO) to develop a Code of Practice concerning the retention of, and access to records known to relate to CSA. This has not been actioned some years following the report's publication, and it is unknown whether this work will be completed. Therefore, there is no statutory requirement to retain these records for such an extensive time period, and a careful management review will need to take place for each record where CSA is relevant before disposal or destruction.

In relation to disciplinary and grievance processes, the ACAS Code of Practice recommends that the employee should be told how long a disciplinary warning will remain current. However, this does not mean that the data itself should be destroyed at the end of the set period.

Any disciplinary proceedings data will be a record of an important event in the course of the employer's relationship with the employee. Should the same employee be accused of similar misconduct at a later date, reference to the earlier proceedings may be relevant. Alternatively, if the employee were to be dismissed for some later offence and then claim at tribunal that they had e.g. "fifteen years of unblemished service", the record of the disciplinary proceedings would be effective evidence to counter this claim.

Employers should, therefore, be careful not to confuse the expiry of a warning for disciplinary purposes with a requirement to destroy all reference to its existence in the personnel file. One danger is that the disciplinary procedure itself often gives the impression that, at the end of the effective period for the warning, the warning will be "removed from the file". This or similar wording should make it clear that, while the warning will not remain active in relation to future disciplinary matters, a record of what has occurred will be kept. Careful attention should be paid to the requirements of the statutory guidance in Keeping Children Safe in Education in relation to any records of disciplinary matters, including inclusion in a reference for a future employer.

STUDENT RECORDS

Retention of all records relating to students should take into account the recommendations of the report of the Independent Inquiry into Child Sexual Abuse (IICSA). The report from the Inquiry recommended that records associated with child sexual abuse (CSA) should be preserved for 75 years. The Inquiry emphasised the need for this extended retention period due to the significant value these records hold for victims, and advised that they should be subject to regular reviews throughout this duration.

In instances where there is evidence or allegations of CSA, schools and academies may decide to retain the complete record - whether of a pupil, staff member, or other related documents - not merely the segments directly related to the abuse.

The Inquiry report advised that the UK government instructs the Information Commissioner's Office (ICO) to develop a Code of Practice concerning the retention of, and access to, records known to relate to CSA. This has not been actioned some years following the report's publication, and it is unknown whether this work will be completed. Therefore, there is no statutory requirement to retain these records for such an extensive time period, and a careful management review will need to take place for each record where CSA is relevant before disposal or destruction of the record.
